Organizational Description

The Center for the Development of Recycling (CDR) is a university-based non-profit organization that provides recycling and materials management information. CDR is contracted with regional government to operate the official recycling website for the counties of San Mateo and Santa Clara. We also operate the recycling hotline and Household Hazardous Waste appointment center for Santa Clara County. The Recycling Hotline and Household Hazardous Waste Appointment Center is open from 9:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. Hotline information is always available at RecycleStuff.org.

As part of San Jose State University's (SJSU) Department of Environmental Studies and the SJSU Research Foundation (SJSURF), faculty-managed service-learning students conduct research, operate the hotline, and develop information resources found on RecycleStuff.org. The collaboration between Santa Clara and San Mateo County, the cities within them, SJSU and SJSURF provide residents and businesses with cost-efficient recycling and materials management information service while students obtain valuable learning experiences that they bring with them into careers to continuously benefit society. Students earn academic credit while they gain valuable public service experience, and develop project management and information skills that prepare them for environmental careers, particularly in the field of materials management.
